

Kepler.

Marketing software for people running marketing on their own.

1 YOU PICK WHAT YOU'RE AIMING AT

Revenue Pipeline Meetings Sign-ups Visitors AI share of voice

2 KEPLER DOES THE WORK, AND PUTS IT LIVE

SEO AEO Email outreach Paid ads Social Content

3 YOU SEE WHAT CAME BACK, PER CHANNEL

Visitors → Leads → Meetings → Pipeline → Closed revenue

↑ And it goes round again. The gap between your target and where you actually are decides what Kepler makes next — and what performed best shapes how it's written.

- 1 Give it a number and a date. Kepler works the target out from your own past results rather than asking you to guess, and says plainly when what you're aiming at can't be reached in the time you've left it.
- 2 Nothing is produced in isolation — every asset is written for the goal you set. Kepler also tells you what to do next: how far short you are, and how much more work would close the gap, worked out from what your own campaigns have actually delivered rather than an industry average.
- 3 When a deal closes in your CRM, Kepler traces it back to the campaign that started it. It shows the revenue it can't claim beside the revenue it can — and it won't tell you your paid cost per lead beats your SEO one, because nothing honestly prices organic work.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

Sets up your brand once

Reads your website and any documents you upload, and learns what your company does, who you sell to and how you sound. Everything it writes afterwards uses that.

Content

Blog posts, landing pages and web copy in your voice, with a final pass so they read like a person wrote them. Publishes straight to WordPress.

SEO

Keyword research scored by buying intent and clustered, then turned into pages. Connect Search Console and the estimates are replaced by your real impressions, clicks and positions — plus the queries worth acting on.

AEO

Tracks whether you get cited when someone asks ChatGPT, Perplexity or Google's AI answers about your category — which prompts you show up for, which you've lost, and who gets cited instead of you.

Email outreach that actually sends

Multi-step sequences that go out on a schedule from your own domain, with sending limits, warm-up and domain checks handled. Replies, out-of-office notes and bounces are sorted for you, and anyone who replies or unsubscribes stops receiving the rest automatically.

Finding and researching people

Search by job title, seniority, company size and location, build lists, and get a researched brief on an account before you approach it.

Paid ads

Ad copy written eight ways against competitors' live ads, audience targeting checked against what the platforms will actually accept, pushed live to Google and Meta from here — then spend, cost per result and return on spend come back in.

Social

Plan a month at a time with no repeated angles, publish to LinkedIn, Instagram and Facebook on schedule, and see what each post did.

Campaigns

One plan that turns a goal into ordered steps across every channel, each step with its content already written — and campaign shapes that have worked for companies like yours.

The whole picture, honestly cut

Every channel's contribution to the same goal, with the share nobody can attribute shown rather than quietly folded in.

It gets better the longer you use it

What performed feeds into the next brief. New work builds on what you've already published instead of repeating it. And you can see what Kepler has learned about your voice and your market as it accumulates.

Your team

Several people in one workspace, with roles, and a record of who changed what.

Most tools help you make more marketing. Kepler is built to tell you whether it worked.